Yung Han Golf Club 永漢高爾夫球場

Don't be confused if you hear Yung Han Golf Club and Saint Andrews of the East mentioned in the same breath, any similarities are deliberate. Having played the most celebrated golf courses during his extensive travels, and finding the courses back home lacking the culture and heritage of this great game he loved so much, the globetrotting founder of Yung Han was impressed enough by the Old Course at St. Andrews that he wanted the same Scottish links experience replicated along the Taiwanese coast. Interestingly, he commissioned Syunsuke Katou, a leading Japanese course architect known for creating layouts that intrigue and challenge the professional and low amateur, yet isn't too penal for the social golfer, to design the layout. The mandate to mirror the ambience of a links course on the Scottish coast resulted in the classic beauty and modern innovation that is Yung Han, the St. Andrews of the Orient. A championship level course of international standard, each hole is unique on its own, designed to delight and surprise at every turn, and at the same time inspire the golfer. Distinctively links in design, Yung Han plays to the undulating terrain of the nearby mountains with a noticeable lack of trees, unlike many courses in the area. Because of its coastal location, sunsets of magnificent hue are set against the backdrop of the undulating hills. The layout at Yung Han can be benign or a beast, depending on whether it's calm or the wind whistles.
