From the outside That Luang looks more like a fortress surrounded by high walls and it features two temples with the main stupa, the top of which is covered with gold leaf, standing 148 feet tall. The lovely architecture is in Lao style, mainly influenced by Buddhist beliefs. They are finely crafted, red-lacquer doors, pointed lesser stupas, many Buddha images and beautiful flower and animal images. The Patuxay monument is one of Vientiane's most evident developments. Located at the center of Vientiane, on the end of Lane Xang Avenue is the impressive arch. Patuxay which translates to "Victory Gate" Surrounded the monument is a large arched gateway. Though the design is influenced by the Arc de Triomphe in Paris, the upper part and decoration is typical of Laos' style.
